Thanks for picking up the first ever Culture Cringe "Jukebox Series" split 7" record. The two bands, Roman Polanski's Baby and Megajoos worked very hard to ensure that the songs will be pleasing to the ear and provide maximum replay value. Both of the bands are based in Tennessee, which now has a thriving rock and roll scene, and both bands are currently playing and booking dates all around the United States (and possibly, the world!).

The first time I met Megajoos was at my house. I invited the guys over for a podcast chat, after being strongly encouraged to do so by members of a band they are friends with, Tennessee Scum. Upon arriving we instantly hit it off and soon realized that we share a mutual admiration for such pop culture mainstays as KISS and Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles.

Needless to say, the podcast went well and I experienced my first Megajoos show a week later. I was not prepared for the raw thunder and showmanship that assaulted my senses. I was instantly a huge fan, and every show I've seen since then has successfully topped the last!!

I first heard Roman Polanski's Baby after being sent a link to their online practice demo recordings. My ears melted. I hadn't heard that kind of nerve and aggression (while retaining instant memorable sing along chorus) from a local band in years! Soon after, I saw them for the first time....playing outside on the hottest day of the summer at 12 noon in the parking lot of a used bike shop. We were all dying from the heat, and RPB delivered what has since become a legendary "were you there?" show. Since then the band has continued to blow my mind!
So please, put on this record, turn it up LOUD, and enjoy two of Tennessee's finest rock and roll bands.
